STRAW HATS FOR MEN.

Great Variety of Ribbons—College Colors

Produced, but there are others.

Hatters this season, for no apparent reason, have cut down brims, when they were most useful in keeping the sun out of one's eyes, and raised crowns to a height which is not pretty and is very unbecoming. All the same, you have got to buy these hats because they are the new shape. There are about five different styles of straw hats put on the market this summer, and they are being foisted on every dude that comes along to buy, according to the New York Herald, which says:

The smooth straw of last summer, with the exception of a narrower brim and higher crown, is the fashion this season. There is also the rougher straw, called picapica, in two patterns, both with straight brims, and still another style shown is the alpine, fashioned after the Hamburg hat, a pretty conceit brought out in London last season and worn by men with beards who like to look picturesque. Then there is the curly brim straw hat, which suggests a rather elderly style of man and face, though the fellows who wear it do not wish to be called elderly at all.

With these shapes an infinity of ideas are displayed in the ribbons which ornament the straw hat. You will find in all the Broadway shops Harvard's crimson, Yale's blue, Princeton's black and yellow, Columbia's blue and white, Cornell's red and white and Pennsylvania's red and blue. All hatters now keep these colors in stock, and a buckle fastens the ribbon to the hat in a very satisfactory manner. Not long ago the elastic hat ribbon band was all the rage, but it wrinkled and creased and has now given way to the buckle. Apart from the popular college colors there is an endless variety of ribbons for hats, so that a man of any taste or of any peculiarity of taste can buy his colors to suit his complexion. As a matter of fact, men very often go wrong in this department of dress and wear ribbons which don't suit at all.

Influence of the Wheel.

An influence of the wheel noted and commented upon in the New York Times is its bearing upon domestic life. Those who have reached the early forties and beyond, have found a kind of companionship in the bicycle that is as strong as it is sometimes unconscious. The advent of children and the encroachments of business cares are two elements of life that slowly force a man and wife apart to a greater or less extent. After 20 years of matrimony, it not infrequently happens that without any fault or conscious estrangement the two are spending most of their time in separate pursuits. Into this breach the wheel has slipped with a magnetic power. A common enthusiasm for the steel steed brings them together in interest, their daily spins in company make them amusement sharers, and the silver wedding anniversary is likely to stretch on to the golden one, if they are spared to see it, with their lives happily welded.

Information for Tourists.

A passenger by the last Celestial steamer was met on the dock by a Hawaiian American friend, who resides in Honolulu. As the pair walked to have the newcomer's gripsack scrawled over with chalk marks by the Customs Inspector at the gate the stranger remarked to his friend: "Do you have much rain here?" "RAINIER me boy, gallons of it, just come up to the Ala Moana where they keep it all day, clear and cool. We'll just be in time for lunch too, and that's the only place in town where they serve it up in proper style." "I'll be right with you," said the stranger, and they went.

A Poole Prevented

What the consequences might have been if the Palama Grocery had not received another large invoice of the justly celebrated Salvation Army Tea, is something hard to say. When we first advertised it, we expected quite a run on it, but the demand lately has far exceeded our expectations. However, in time to prevent a panic we are in receipt of another large invoice. H. Cannon, sole agent for the Islands, Palama Grocery, Tel. 755.
